

Choosing Your Garage Door

When it comes to choosing a garage door, many people shop around to find the cheapest option. However, price should not be the only factor you consider when you are making a serious purchase – in fact, crime watchdogs always caution ‘if it sounds too good to be true, it probably is!’ All too often, a cheap price encourages consumers to purchase a poor-quality product.

5

Things to Ask Yourself Before You Choose a Garage Door Supplier

Reputation

Are they a reputable company?
Have they been in business for a long time or are they new?

Contact

How easy is it to get in touch with them – and do they have official business premises?

Quality

Are their garage doors good quality – or are their prices too cheap to trust?

Guarantee

Do they offer a warranty? How long is it for, and how much will it cost?

Trusted

Do they have any official accreditations?

When manufacturers make a product, they have two choices. They can:

Make the product good enough to last a short while – often, just long enough to outlive its manufacturer’s warranty. This is usually the cheapest way of making anything, and means they can sell it at a low price.

Make a quality product designed to meet and exceed customer expectations, using reliable components to ensure trouble-free operation for many years to come. The price may be higher, but you’ll get less hassle and more use out of the product.

At Norfolk Roller Doors, we only supply high quality garage doors from respected manufacturers. We are approved installers of Warm Protect roller doors and Somfy powered motors because we trust these brands, and they trust us.